Our story

For many people, there comes a point where rising costs, financial pressure, and limited lifestyle options make it clear that something needs to change.

The next step is not just about moving countries.

It is about creating a better way of living.

A place where your money goes further, your daily life feels less pressured, and long-term stability becomes achievable again.

If you are ready to actively explore what that future could look like, this may be the beginning of your next chapter.

Let's keep it simple what you decide to do is entirely up to you.

that forced us to consider alternatives*

Where we was at April 2026

We lived in Australia for the last 50 years.

It was great.

But slowly we found it becoming more and more expensive for even everyday items.

So much so the previously retired lady of the house decided to go back to work - at the age of 65.

(Being a qualified nurse opened up some employment possibilities).

But, imagine, going BACK to work at age 65 - doesn't make sense, does it?

As for me - the old guy - age 74 - I was trying to cope with loans I'd taken in previous years.

Any kind of employment was out of the question.

Then, more rapidly, cost to live just got too much - one of them being the mortgage when interest rates was increased again - the cash fund rapidly diminished and ultimately expired.

The lenders were threatening foreclosure - so we was forced to sell our property before they did.

Luckily we came out with a bit of funds to support us for a while.

What we didn't realise is that we'd simply accepted our financial demise as inevitable and adjusted ourselves to a life of poverty - in Australia - to just 'keep going' as long as we could.

But, we realised, - our problem is - , if we stay here the same will happen again - our funds will slowly get eaten away to nothing and next time we got no financial backing.

So, we concluded, our only hope of financial survival with any kind of quality of life is to make a massive leap forwards to somewhere our resources mean something still and we can have some kind of quality of life.

Somewhere we can maybe even live comfortably on a single pension and save the other for those 'luxuries' we haven't seen in quite a while.

No need to keep going - it's simple.

And you already know the longer-term picture.

Probably, you're experiencing the same or similar scenario or likely you wouldn't be reading this.

(If you like, go to the end of this screed to the 'resources' section which will add some perspective to where we find ourselves and why).
